

ocial justice is an attempt to even the playing field when it comes to basic rights...

...we are very capable of being an international beacon of peace and human rights. However, our recent track record does not show that.

It is the right and responsibility of every citizen to be involved in shaping their government into what it ought to be...

VINCENT LONGA, 2010 SCHOLARSHIP AWARDEE

he Adrian Maxson scholarship is a truly inspired initiative that was founded to support social engagement in the Ogden community and beyond.

Receiving the Adrian Maxson scholarship reminded me that the outside world noticed the work I was doing and were positively impacted by my actions.

This realization furthered my resolve to live for service which has helped to enrich my life."

ADRIAN LEIGH MAXSON

AUGUST 31, 1988 – APRIL 4, 2007

THE ADRIAN MAXSON SCHOLARSHIP FOR SOCIAL JUSTICE

Adrian Leigh Maxson was passionate about people, social injustice, humanitarian movements, art, and learning. A senior at the Da Vinci Academy of Science and the Arts in Ogden and an early college freshman at Weber State University, Adrian was killed in an auto-pedestrian accident after attending a benefit concert for Amnesty International at University Village.

In honor of his life and his activism, the Adrian Maxson Scholarship has been established at Weber State University for students who are engaged politically, socially and creatively in the community.

I remember quite vividly at the dinner table, the family talking about all the despair and injustice in the world. Suddenly Adrian looked into my eyes and said, "So what are you doing about it?" After an uncomfortable pause I gave a feeble answer about supporting world hunger, blah, blah, blah. He seemed satisfied with my reply, but I certainly was not.

After Adrian was killed I discovered much about the kind of person he really was—kind and caring, and well beyond his years in understanding global affairs, human rights, and social justice. There was much he would have accomplished in our world.

In his memory and the spirit of his short life the Adrian Maxson Scholarship for Social Justice was established. Please consider a donation to this important and relevant scholarship with a tax-deductable gift.
